Introduction. Antimicrobial drug resistance is a serious health care problem worldwide, and nosocomial infections due to multidrug-resistant (MDR) Gram-negative bacilli (GNB) are of particular concern.1, 2 Initiation of appropriate antibiotics for treatment of severe infections, however, depends on the rapid identification of the pathogen and an understanding of the susceptibility profiles of ...

In microbiology, the minimum inhibitory concentration (MIC) is the lowest concentration of a chemical, usually a drug, which prevents visible growth of bacterium. MIC depends on the microorganism, the affected human being (in vivo only), and the antibiotic itself. The MIC is determined by preparing solutions of the chemical in vitro at increasing concentrations, incubating the solutions with ...

Introduction. Acute cholangitis is a common disorder, which places a substantial burden on patients and the acute care system , , . Antimicrobial therapy with appropriate biliary drainage is considered the standard of care in managing acute cholangitis, with or without bacteraemia , . However, the optimal duration of antimicrobial therapy remains unknown.
