I was lying on my bed with an arm flung over my eyes, wishing theyâ€™d turn off the bloody lights already. My body was aching and sore from a fistfight I had gotten into before dinner, when some cocky new prisoner in a different cellblock had decided he wanted my pack of cigarettes, rather than work to get his own. The man had to be at least twenty years my senior â€“ a business man used to getting everything he wanted, if I guessed correctly.
