The programming model and register set are fairly conventional, ultimately based on the register structure of the Datapoint 2200 (which the related 8086 family also inherited). The Z80 was designed as an extension of the 8080, created by the same engineers, which in turn was an extension of the 8008. The 8008 was basically a PMOS implementation of the TTL-based CPU of the Datapoint 2200.

In computer engineering, microarchitecture, also called computer organization and sometimes abbreviated as μ arch or uarch, is the way a given instruction set architecture (ISA), is implemented in a particular processor. A given ISA may be implemented with different microarchitectures; implementations may vary due to different goals of a given design or due to shifts in technology.

Hi and thanks for the excellent poster. I was wondering if you had some real world implementations you would be willing to share. I was hoping to get an example of how to model a composite document that could be used to maintain the technical implementation for a complex IT infrastructure.
