multiple processes, scale, spatio-temporal pattern, and soils. Using observations of multi-temporal data from the Chihuahuan Desert, we describe a new approach to classifying vegetation dynamics based on multiple scales of vegetation and soil pattern as well as cross-scale interactions.

On a macroscopic scale, dynamic mechanical analysis (DMA) tests are performed. The measurements focus on the influence of prestrain on the behaviour. On one hand, the linear behaviour of the materials resulting from the design of experiments is characterized. On the other hand, the effect of prestrain on the non linear behaviour is quantified.
