Nature, in the broadest sense, is the natural, physical, or material world or universe. "Nature" can refer to the phenomena of the physical world, and also to life in general. The study of nature is a large, if not the only, part of science. Although humans are part of nature, human activity is often understood as a separate category from other natural phenomena.

Cities have built extensive urban water supply systems, often relying on dozens of sources hundreds of kilometers distant (Fig. 1a). If one ignores this urban water infrastructure and just assumes urban dwellers obtain water near where they live, as previous hydrologic modeling efforts have, 39 ± 4% of urban dwellers would be estimated to be in water stress.
