Two peas in a pod They even dressed us the same. My mother said that it was easier for her just to buy two of everything. Sometimes it was the same clothes but in different colours " a red top for me and a yellow one for my sister, for example. When they did that, we swapped the clothes so that they still couldn't tell us apart.

As digital learning is becoming more and more popular, photocopiers are becoming less common or copy limits are drastically reduced. I love using current articles as part of my teaching units, but I do not find that they are always able to be printed in a school-friendly format. I cannot photocopy 5 pages for my 60 students. I needed a more economical way to print internet articles.

Two peas in a pod, they called us. Two drops of water. Sometimes we couldn't hardly tell ourselves from each other. At least when we were small. But as we grew up things began to change. Everybody thinks identical twins are, well, identical. But if you're a twin you'll know that it's not true. Physically, yes, we were almost identical.
